PURPOSE

To increase the health care professional’s ability to identify, manage and provide care services to patients experiencing high risk pregnancies, domestic violence, adolescent gynecological problems and sexual abuse, aging and issues in fertility.

OBJECTIVES

At the conclusion of this conference, attendees should be able to:

- Appreciate basic fetal anomalies and the ability of modern ultrasound to diagnose them.
- Describe new advances in prenatal genetics such as microarray testing and extraction of fetal cells from the maternal circulation.
- Describe evolving guidelines in assisted reproduction and discuss ethical challenges that clinicians may face.
- Apply at least two new communication techniques when broaching sexuality-related issues with females in four life stages.
- Diagnose and treat common adolescent gynecologic problems.
- Medically evaluate children alleged to have experienced sexual victimization.
- Discuss prevalence and types of domestic violence.
- Identify workup and treatment options for male infertility.
- Identify the purpose of the interdisciplinary management of the critical care OB patient.
- Review New Jersey’s annual maternal mortality statistics to enable clinicians to appreciate trends that may be changing in our profession.
- Recognize issues facing the aging female.
- Describe the management of the intrapartum pregestational diabetic patient.
- Discuss the various fertility preservation options available to cancer patients.
- Describe hospital’s structures, tools and additional elements that significantly reduced preventable claims in OB.
